

Public Policy with a Community-led Development Lens

The ultimate objective of public policy is to improve people's lives and wellbeing. There's growing recognition that policy development requires a broader range of tools and approaches to achieve sustainable change for communities and individuals. This targeted one-day workshop for government officials will support policy makers to act as partners, enablers and co-hosts, rather than prescribing from the top. Using real-time case studies participants will construct an approach that embraces complexity and rapidly changing contexts.

Outcomes

- To apply a community-led development approach to the public policy process
- To tease out where and when it is best to use a CLD approach
- To reframe traditional positions
- To determine key questions that need to be asked
- To reframe the public policy process to increase flexibility for communities to be active, supported and resourced to define what issues they wish to address and how they intend to do it.
